Cape Cod Children's Place Announces Abigail Field as Director of Development

A new leader is named as the organization completes its 30th year

EASTHAM, MA, February 11, 2026— Erin Sullivan, Executive Director of Cape Cod Children's Place (CCCP) announced today that Abigail Field has been appointed new Director of Development for the organization. "Adding Abby to our leadership team allows us to strengthen our community relationships and build sustainability for our services that support families and community partners to increase their strengths, skills and resilience so children can thrive," said Sullivan. Field, an experienced nonprofit leader, previously served as Chief Executive Officer for the Cape Wellness Collaborative and Associate Director for Pleasant Bay Community Boating (PBCB).

Abigail's previous nonprofit leadership has focused on building and sustaining programs that increase quality of life for Cape residents including free of charge integrative care for people facing cancer through CWC, and accessible, affordable sailing and marine science education and opportunities through PBCB. Field has extensive experience building partnerships within the community and creating access to support and resources that enrich and secure local children, families and individuals.

In addition to her work in nonprofit, Field is an award-winning classical pianist, music teacher, mother and photographer.

With a special love for families and children, she embraces the opportunity to build upon the foundation of nurture and support being offered at CCCP.

About Cape Cod Children's Place

Cape Cod Children's Place is a community-rooted nonprofit dedicated to supporting families across the Cape. Since our founding, we've worked to create safe, nurturing spaces where children can thrive and caregivers feel empowered.

Our programs span early education, family support, and community engagement—each designed to strengthen families and build resilience. We believe in the power of connection, compassion, and collaboration. Whether you're a parent, educator, partner, or neighbor, you're part of our story.
